Blended intensive program overview

Erasmus+ Blended Intensive Program (2023-1-SI01-KA131-HED-000139137-1)

VIOLENCE IN SOCIETY

Since 1990 over 2.2 million people have lost their lives in armed conflicts and terrorist attacks. However, the number of nearly 12 million deaths due to criminal activities during the same period significantly surpasses the bloody consequences of armed conflicts. Annually, more than 464,000 men, women, and children die as a result of homicides and murders. Violent deaths are on rise, with the Americas leading in the number of violent deaths at 17.2 per 100,000 inhabitants, followed by Africa with 13, Europe with 3, Oceania and Asia with 2.3 violent deaths per 100,000 inhabitants. 81% of the victims of violent deaths are men and boys, who also account over 90% of all violent deaths (UNODC, 2019).

The event is inspired by the awarded 2023 TV Mini-Series Inhumanum: The Inhumanity of Man, which aims to objectively present all the aspects and consequences resulting from the act of murder, thereby contributing to the culture of non-violence in society.

Objective: Violence in society is a complex and multifaceted issue with various contributing factors. It encompasses physical, emotional, psychological, and structural forms of harm inflicted on individuals or groups. Addressing violence in society requires a comprehensive approach that addresses underlying social, economic, and cultural factors while also implementing measures to prevent violence, support victims, and hold perpetrators accountable. Several factors and strategies can contribute to the prevention of violence in society. One of these is also raising awareness of these problems and disseminating knowledge among society to prevent such events. Additionally, promoting a culture of non-violence, tolerance, and respect for human rights is essential for building safer and more peaceful societies.

To deepen students' knowledge and raise their awareness the following pedagogical approaches will be used:

- a) Lectures on selected topics: where legal, social, economic, and cultural factors of violence will be presented and discussed in classroom;

- b) Problem-Based Learning: Present students with real-world problems or scenarios that require critical thinking, collaboration, and problem-solving skills to solve. This will be supported by video material observation before the lecture to arouse students' interest in the topic;
- c) Inquiry-Based Learning: Encourage students to ask questions, investigate topics of interest, and construct their own understanding through exploration and discovery.
- d) Collaborative Learning: Foster collaboration among students through group activities and discussions allowing them to learn from each other and develop communication and teamwork skills.
- e) Socratic Method: Facilitate discussions by asking probing questions that challenge students' assumptions, encourage critical thinking, and promote deeper understanding.
- f) Culturally Responsive Teaching: Incorporate diverse perspectives, experiences, and cultural references into the curriculum to make learning more relevant and inclusive for all students.

By incorporating a combination of these pedagogical approaches, educators can create engaging and impactful learning experiences that deepen students' knowledge and raise their awareness.

The outcome of the event will be reflected in promoting a culture of non-violence, tolerance, and respect for human rights which is essential for building a safer and more peaceful democratic society. Additionally, a better consciousness and awareness of students might foster the dissemination of knowledge in society to prevent violence.

Target groups (audience): Bachelor, Master, and Doctoral students from Erasmus EU Partner and Program countries and partner institutions.

Benefits for partners involved: Promoting a culture of non-violence, tolerance, and respect for human rights.

Expected event outcomes: The program of the Blended Intensive program "Violence in Society" will have the academic value of 3 ECTS.

Financial aspects: Erasmus+ project funds of sending and hosting institutions are available (STA and SMS BIP mobilities).
